We work with local legislators on your behalf and our communities

“All politics is local.” This observation by the late Thomas P. “Tip” O’Neill, Jr., former Speaker of the House of Representatives, means that even national politics have a local impact, and people care most about issues that directly affect them.

Indirectly, this famous adage underscores the importance and value of local politics.

At Clay Electric, we think it’s critical to develop and cultivate relationships with local legislators because they craft, introduce and vote on legislation that impacts the local business climate, the environment and quality of life for our community. This is why we work closely with our local elected officials. Our purpose is to provide safe, reliable and affordable electricity, but our mission is to help our community thrive. Our current representatives and their contact information are included in this edition of Kilowatt.

We are a local business that powers economic development and prosperity for our region. As a cooperative, we have deep roots here, and we listen closely to our members to better understand their needs. Our leadership, Board members and employees live and work right here in the communities we serve.

We strive to be an advocate for North Florida, ensuring local legislators know, understand and act on the issues that are important to our area.

Providing industry guidance and expertise

As a practical matter, we recognize most legislators are “generalists,” yet they vote on a wide range of issues. Their expertise may not include the changing energy industry, which is why Clay Electric, the Florida Electric Cooperatives Association and the National Rural Electric Cooperative Association provide guidance and expertise from subject matter experts who’ve been in the industry for many years.

Today’s energy landscape is an increasingly complex topic covering not only the traditional engineering and vegetation management aspects of the industry, but also encompasses technology, cybersecurity, the electrification of the transportation sector and more.

Our experts provide briefings and backgrounders to legislators, committees and staff, and we offer expert testimony for hearings and other legislative or regulatory meetings or gatherings. And because we’re involved in economic development and we know local community leaders, we can provide insight on how issues and policies under discussion might impact our region.

Co-op as a conveyor

In addition, we periodically invite legislators and their staff to the co-op for tours so they can see first hand how we operate and can view our operations center, substations and more, all while speaking with employees that are so critical to our mission. We also regularly meet with our representatives in their offices in Tallahassee and Washington, D.C., to discuss important issues and legislation.

Representing your best interests

We strive to be a trusted resource on energy issues. Because of our deep roots in the communities we serve, we have a firm understanding of local issues and needs. We will continue looking after the long-term interests of our members. This means we are able to cultivate and foster positive, productive relationships with legislators who know and trust us, because we’re advocating on behalf of those we serve.

We’re proud to power your life and bring good things to the area. We hope you’ll continue to advise us on matters of importance so we can continue to advocate on your behalf and improve the quality of life for all.

Redistricting, budget among issues facing legislators

By Allison Carter
 Florida Electric Cooperatives Association

Florida's 2022 legislative session began Jan. 11. The Florida Electric Cooperatives Association (FECA) will monitor and analyze bills and work with legislators on any legislation impacting members, while ensuring not-for-profit electric co-ops are able to continue providing safe, reliable and affordable electricity.

There are a couple of issues that will dominate the 60-day session. First, due to the decennial U.S. Census, the Florida Legislature must complete the process of redrawing state legislative and congressional boundaries, apportioning each seat with an equal number of constituents to ensure residents receive equal representation. This process is called redistricting. Due to Florida's growth over the last 10 years, the state gained one new Congressional seat — increasing our total representation in the U.S. Congress from 27 to 28. The number of seats in the Florida Legislature will remain the same, but every seat will change its boundaries, which could mean Florida's electric cooperatives will welcome new legislators into our communities. The goal is to complete redistricting prior to the November 2022 mid-term election.

The second issue will be the budget. Florida appears to have successfully recovered from the economic downturn and continues to regain on the impacts and losses surrounding closures of businesses, schools and travel due to COVID-19 precautions. Although during the economic downturn it was difficult to navigate cuts to programs, the practice of balancing our budget every year helped our state weather the recent uncertainty with greater ease and without major budget concerns. This year, the legislature will monitor the continued long-lasting impacts of the virus on Florida's economy while strategically injecting billions of federal dollars directed to Florida for pandemic recovery efforts.

While these issues will dominate the session, there are some underlying issues of interest to co-ops and our communities. The pandemic was devastating to Florida's residents and businesses, but it also highlighted a major disparity among communities regarding the availability of internet/broadband service, especially in rural areas. This year, there will be continued conversations to entice and promote for-profit broadband companies to provide internet services to sparsely populated areas in our state.

The recent stimulus package approved by the federal government earmarked millions of dollars to our state to help with these efforts. FECA looks forward to working with all stakeholders to help foster a solution to provide such a valuable service to all communities in which we work and play.
